In this absolutely side-splitting Ray Cooney farce we meet up again with our taxi-driver John Smith who we last saw in Run For Your Wife over twenty years ago. He still has two wives that he desperately needs to keep from finding out about each other, but he is now blessed with a daughter to Mary and a son to Barbara. The two kids meet on the internet and are amazed at how similar their fathers are: middle name Leonard, same age, same job. They want to meet, but John knows if they do, then the game he has played so well for all these years may very well be up, not to mention the “difficulty” of his two kids potentially having kids of their own!

Ably assisted by his best friend Stanley, John proceeds to tell a concoction of outrageous lies that eventually even Stanley and John have trouble believing. The shenanigans they get up to to maintain the secret is a sight to behold which will have you on the floor rolling with laughter.

If you love a great farce, then this one is for you. Why not get a group of friends together and make a night of it?
