The Action of the Play takes place in the living room behind Jane Ann Shore's newspaper shop in Beckton.

- Act 1. An April night about 8 p.m.
Act 2. The next afternoon.
Act 3. The same night.

Sam Shore, the henpecked husband of Jane Ann, has disappeared into the depths of Sefton Bay two years ago while "seeped in drink" on a fishing expedition with his friend Willie Wilkinson. His widow, always mistress of her own home, has prospered with the assistance of her browbeaten son and young Penny Matthews who had been brought into the household some years before by the late and lamented Sam. The play opens on the eve of the second anniversary of Sams death.
