

EXIT LAUGHING

by Paul Elliott

Three lifelong friends, one empty chair and a bridge night that refuses to die.

For Connie, Leona and Millie, their weekly card game has been the highlight of the last thirty years, a sanctuary of wine, gossip and unconditional support, until their beloved fourth unexpectedly leaves an empty seat at the table. Determined to say goodbye on their own terms, the ladies “borrow” her ashes for one last girls’ night in.

What starts as a quiet tribute explodes into mischief, mayhem, surprise visitors and the sort of belly laughs you only share with your oldest friends.

In one outrageous evening, this hilarious comedy toasts the joys of female friendship, the messiness of growing older, and the wonderful, reckless freedom of having nothing left to lose.
